TO THE HONOURABLE
COURT OF DIRECTORS

OF THE

EAST INDIA COMPANY.

HONOURABLE SIRS,

In continuation of our Address which we had the honour to submit to you in May last, on the occasion of our presenting to your Honourable Court the first portion of our Work, on the history of the Civil Servants of the Indian Establishment, we have now the honour to present to you a second portion of this laborious Work, viz.—A List of the Civil Servants on the Madras Establishment, from the Year 1780 to 1839, with an entire statement of the Important Offices held by each Individual throughout that eventful period. We think we may be permitted to assert that such a History of Services as those performed by your Honourable Court's Civil Servants in India, is unparalleled in the History of the World, and we cannot but feel a pride in having been enabled, by the most assiduous attention, to introduce such a Work to the notice of your Honourable Court, and the Public. We hope shortly to complete the remaining portion of (we trust it will be found) this valuable Work: in the mean time we acknowledge with gratitude the kind and liberal assistance afforded by your Honourable Court to our exertions, also the kind permission granted to us to dedicate this Work also to your Honourable Court.

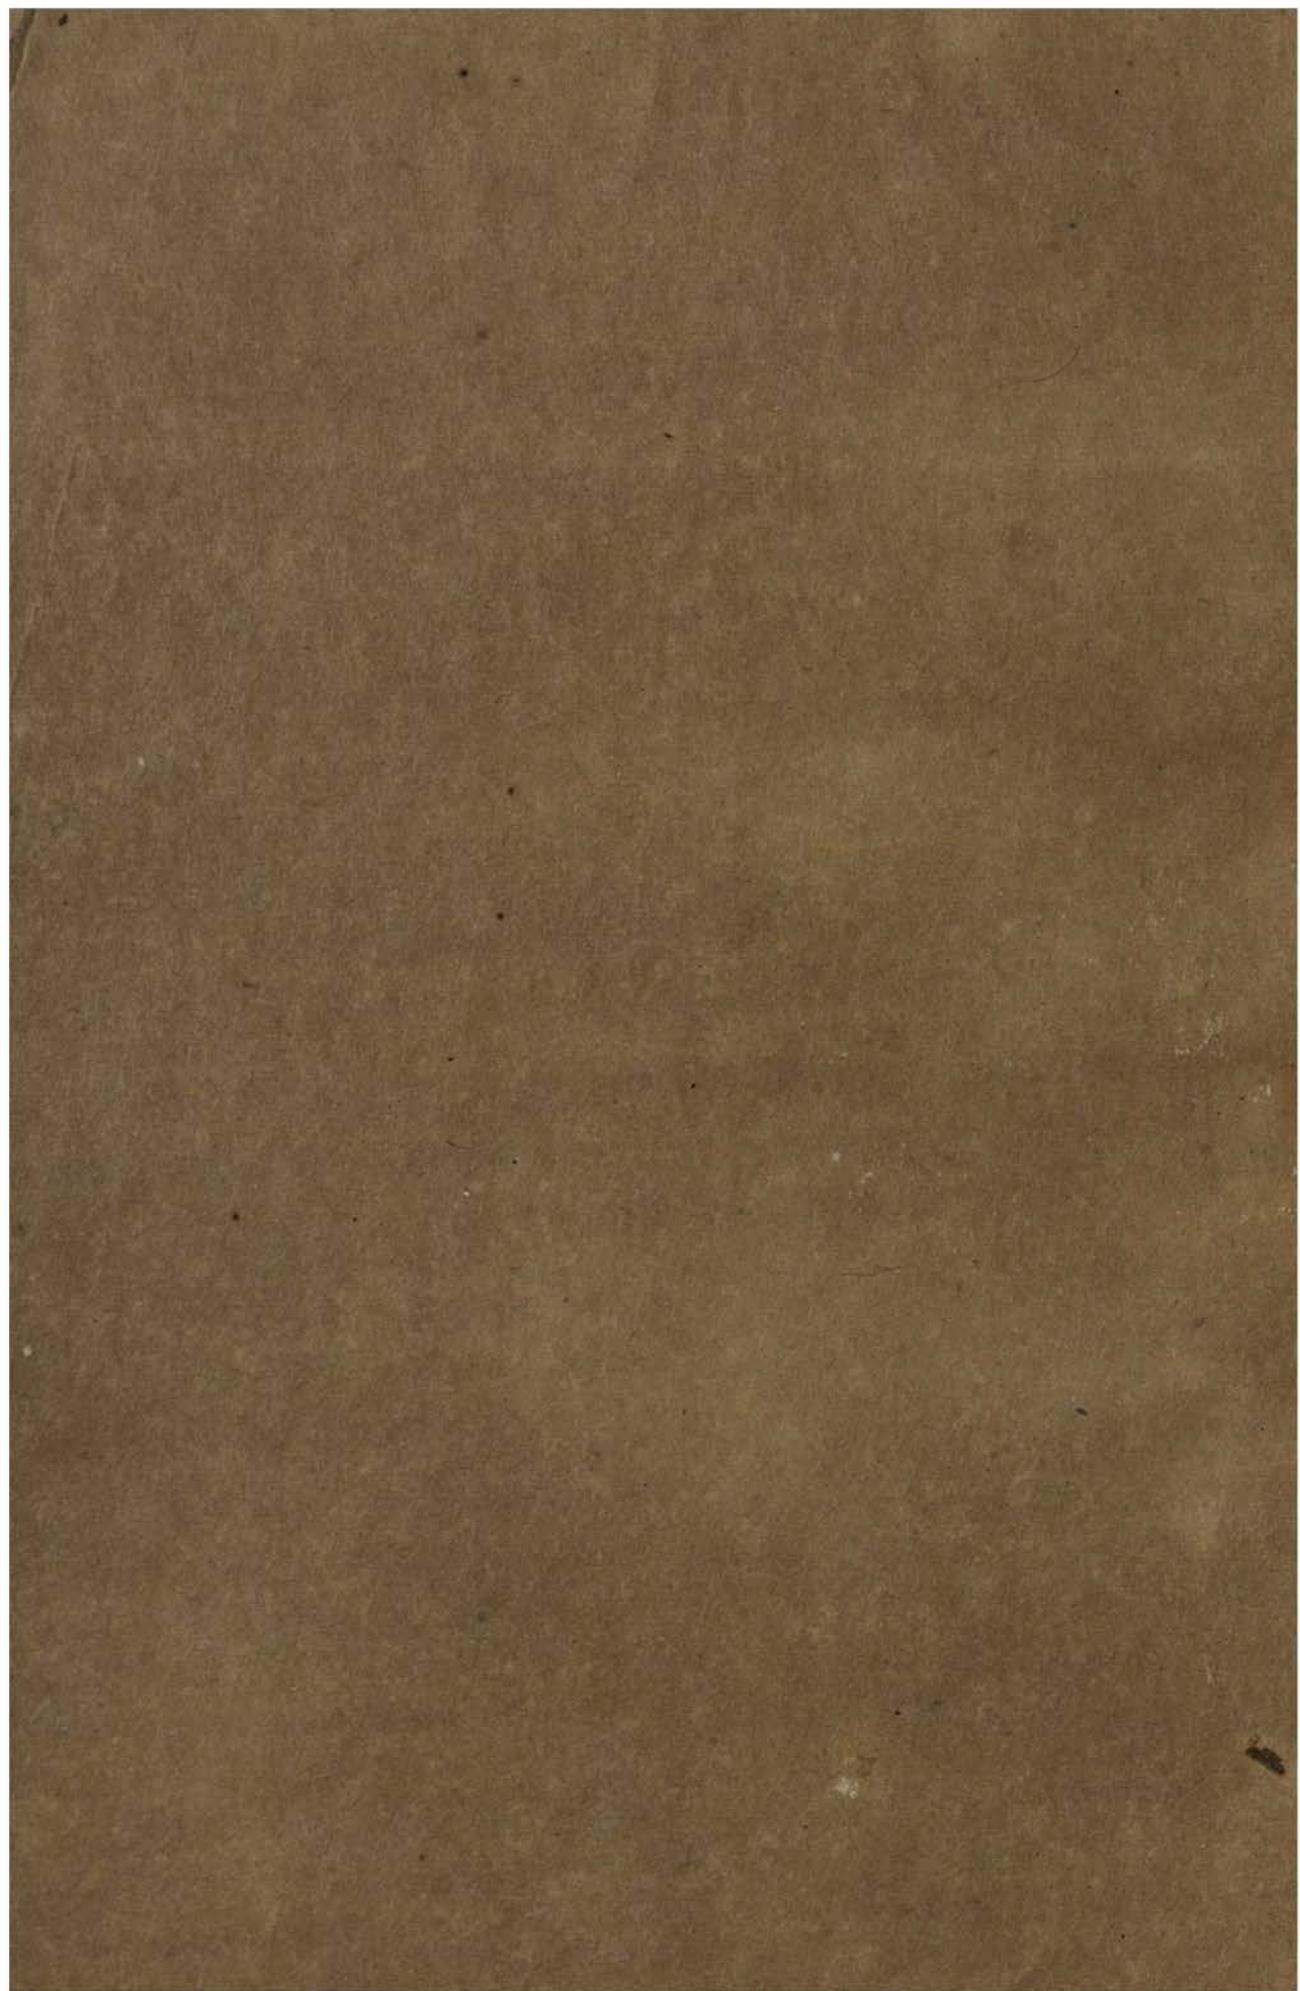

We have the honour to remain,

Honourable Sirs,

With the highest esteem,

Your most obliged and humble Servants,

EDWARD DODWELL,
JAMES SAMUEL MILES.

SELECTION OF CRITICAL NOTICES BY PUBLIC JOURNALS IN ENGLAND,

On Dodwell and Miles's Indian Army Lists and Civil Lists.

"A very useful book to all military men."—Times.

"East India Army. Messrs. Longman, Orme, Brown, & Co., have just published an Alphabetical List of the Indian army, edited by Messrs. Dodwell and Miles, those well-known East India Army Agents. This work gives the Promotion, Retirement, Resignation, or Death, of every Officer, so far as each particular can be traced, from the year 1760, down to September, 1837. It is, in fact, a sort of private biography of the Indian Army, leaving its operations, or public functions, to the general history of the Times. The names of the Editors guarantee the accurate execution of the details, and the splendid manner in which the work has been got up, added to its more substantial claims, cannot fail of recommending it to an extensive patronage, not only among the Military Profession, but among that large class of individuals connected with the Trade and Government of India."—Morning Herald.

"We believe we are correct when we state that no similar work has ever been produced in this country. This work is an invaluable record of the dates of Appointments, Retirements, Resignations, or Deaths, whether in India, or in Europe, of nearly 15,000 Officers; arranged according to their Seasons of Cadetship, by which Officers now in the Service are enabled, with a glance, to trace and contrast their relative Promotions, &c. There is added to the work, the Commanders-in-chief in India, from the year 1770, to 1837; also the Officers of the Company's Service who have received the Honour of the Order of the Bath. The work throughout is well got up, and is of a highly useful character—a work which must have entailed upon the Compilers great labour and application. It is, to say the least of it, a valuable book of reference, and must always be considered as a desirable appendage to the library of those persons connected with the most important part of the British Empire."—Morning Post.

"Messrs. Dodwell and Miles, East India Army Agents, have compiled a work of great labour, and extraordinary utility; this is not a mere list of the Indian Army, but a work containing the dates of the Promotion, Retirement, Resignation, or Death, of every individual that has been in it, from 1760 to 1837. The industry requisite for the completion of such a work must have been great; to persons interested in East India Affairs—to those who wish to learn the fortunes of friends, or relatives, who have joined that Service, the book is invaluable. It is beautifully printed, elegantly bound, and is a perfect model for productions of its class."—Sunday Times.

"This is the most complete, we ought rather to say, only correct, List of the Indian Army, which has ever been laid before the Public. Indeed, it would not be hyperbolical praise to add that it is the most perfect work of the kind (not excepting the Annual Army List), which has ever issued from the Press. It contains not only the name of every Officer of the Indian Army from 1760 to September, 1837, but the date of their respective Promotions, Retirements, Resignations, or Deaths, whether in India, or in Europe. It may be said, therefore, to supply the Military Biography of no fewer than 15,000 Officers, who have served in the East India Company's Army, during the period specified. The Army of each Presidency is given, and, we believe, for the convenience of the Public, sold separately. The work is splendidly got up, and, owing to the tabular arrangement, by which the information attached to the name of each Officer (so as to be intelligible at a glance) is given, could only have been printed at a great expense. Were its price, however, twice what it really is, the book must be considered indispensable to all persons connected with the Indian Army. Indeed, as we have already said, no work of the same class will bear a comparison with it. We trust that the enterprise (we might almost say enthusiasm) which has led to its preparation, will be duly appreciated by those for whose convenience it has been compiled."—United Service Gazette.

"There can be no dispute as to the value of such a work as this, which contains nearly 15,000 names of Officers of the Indian Army, arranged alphabetically under the Presidencies to which they belong, with columns of dates of Appointment, Promotion, Resignation, Retirement or Death. Its accuracy must be taken on the credit of the Compilers, whose experience for so many years in the Military Department of the East India House gives them a title to claim that credit. The work is splendidly printed."—Asiatic Journal.

"It is almost needless, we think, to do more than give the title of the work before us (which we do at length), to shew how highly interesting it must be to the entire Military Service of India. Few Officers of any standing can be without numerous Companions in Arms, in whose actions they feel an interest: to all such we can cordially recommend the present publication as invaluable: its production must have cost the spirited Compilers an immensity of labour, but we congratulate them on the credit which, in an equal proportion, they cannot fail to obtain by it."—Oriental Herald.

"The situation which Messrs. Dodwell and Miles held in the Military Department of the East India Company's Home Establishment has enabled them to compile and complete this Herculean task; and, having inspected their labours, we venture to assert that a more valuable Book of Reference to the names of Officers of our Indian Army could not be published."—Naval and Military Gazette.

"This is indeed a very valuable compilation for the Indian Army; and, if accurately prepared, as, from the facilities enjoyed by Messrs. Dodwell and Miles, we have reason to believe it is, it is a work which no Indian Military Library or Reading-room should be without; it embraces the periods of Service of no less than 15,000 Officers; in short, being a complete Army List for the Indian Army, as Egerton's Army List is for the Queen's Army, it is well worthy of being preserved in Indian families who have connexions in the Indian Army."—East India and Colonial Magazine.

"The eminent Army Agents who have so very creditably to themselves furnished the mass of information detailed in the two Volumes above cited, have achieved an exceedingly useful and important undertaking. The utility of such a work will be at once recognized in the vast saving of that time and labour which a reference to official records could alone have otherwise supplied, in obtaining the information which is instantaneously imparted by the pages of these alphabetical lists, and the importance of the publication must be obvious to that very numerous and respectable portion of society whose connections—whether of a social, commercial, or mercantile nature—are associated with our Anglo-Indian interests. The industry devoted to a register of this kind—so carefully compiled as are these lists—is most exemplary, and the more to be estimated inasmuch as, to the merit of unimpeachable accuracy, is conjoined the credit of originality of design, felicity of arrangement, and admirable neatness of typographical execution. Either by the officers, and the Company's servants—at home and abroad—the ready reference afforded by these volumes to the records they contain—the work cannot be too highly appreciated, and will not fail to command, in favour of its respectable compilers, the respect and thankfulness of a very large portion of the British Public now engaged in supporting, or who have been employed in sustaining the honor, security, and interests of our Oriental possessions.”—Taunton Courier.

“We have already introduced to our readers the admirable Lists which have been published by Messrs. Dodwell and Miles of the Officers of the Indian Army, with the praise due to the enterprise which suggested them, and the indefatigable industry and care bestowed upon their compilation; and we see no reason to retract one syllable which we have advanced in their favour. We are fully aware how impossible it is to render statistical details perfectly correct, but we believe that the Lists to which we allude are more perfect than any publication of the same kind whatsoever, and this opinion has been confirmed since our former notice of them by many Officers in the Service of the East India Company, more competent to form a judgment on the matter than we can profess to be. The success, both in profit and honour, which has attended Messrs. Dodwell and Miles's previous experiments, has stimulated them to the compilation of an alphabetical list of the civil servants of the East India Company. The first volume, containing the name with the dates of their respective appointment of the Bengal Civil Servants, is now before us, comprising no fewer than 1200 names. Exactly similar in plan and form to their East India Army List, this volume appears to have been edited with equal diligence. As a work of reference it must be invaluable, to all who are, or have, at any time, been connected with the East India Company's Service. In looking over the list of subscribers prefixed to the work, we have the best evidence that could possibly have been afforded (more convincing than a hundred favourable newspaper criticisms) of the merits of Messrs. Dodwell and Miles's previous publications of the same class. Independently of the marked patronage of the East India Company, who had taken no fewer than seventy copies, we find among the subscribers the names of five generals, nine lieutenant-generals, sixty major-generals, eighteen colonels, forty lieutenant-colonels, and a proportionate number of officers of other ranks. Surely, had their former experiments occasioned any disappointment, this sort of patronage could hardly have been secured for a new List from the same authorities.”—United Service Gazette, 15th June 1839.

“Within an unusually long term of editorial life, few, if any, subjects of inquiry have been more frequently addressed to us than those by the relatives, in all possible degrees of propinquity, of public officers, and particularly respecting those associated with the servants of the Hon. East India Company, as to their locations or existence. Long severance from their connections at home—the distant field of their exertions, and the difficulties and delays incident to the transmission of information, may in very many instances have led to this very natural yearning for specific intelligence, to say nothing of the pecuniary expectancies often involved in such investigations. Reference to official records could alone be suggested on such occasions, and these were only available by employing individuals in London, and encountering expense and loss of time, for perhaps inadequate services and an unsatisfactory result. It was therefore with great satisfaction that we observed the announcement of a volume, comprising every kind of desirable intelligence relating to the Civil Officers of the Hon. East India Company; and that gratification was much enhanced, by finding so useful a task in the hands of persons whose previous exertions in a similar course of industry gave ample assurance for the successful accomplishment of such an undertaking. To Messrs. Dodwell and Miles, general agents to the Hon. East India Company's Civil and Military Servants, the public now stand indebted for their “Alphabetical List of Bengal Civil Servants, with their respective appointments from 1780 to 1838,”—a work, the importance and vast utility of which are indicated in its title, as prefixed to this notice. It was by the same indefatigable and highly respected gentlemen, that the “List of the Officers of the Indian Army, from 1760 to 1837,” was recently published; and they have now, in addition to those honourable labours, announced the publication of an “Alphabetical List of the Medical Officers of the East India Company's Service, from 1764 to 1837.” The Madras and Bombay Civil Service, from 1760 to 1838, is also preparing for the press. The terms of unqualified approbation in which every gentleman connected with the Indian Service speaks of the labours involved in, and the highly meritorious accuracy displayed throughout the “Lists” already published by their very respectable Editors, will, we sincerely trust, convey to them a gratifying testimony that their exemplary industry, though not expended upon the flowery and refreshing fields of literary adventure, have yet secured a rejoicing harvest in the willing homage of thankfulness and respect, from all who have had the means of estimating the value of their prodigious toil.”—Taunton Courier, 26th June, 1839.

“This is a splendid companion to the “Alphabetical List of the Officers of the Indian Army” compiled and published by the same gentlemen. Under each name are set forth the various offices, with the dates of appointment filled by the individual; when out of employ, and when his connection with the Service terminated. It is a most valuable work, and luxuriously printed by Bensley.”—Asiatic Journal of July, 1839.

“A valuable work of reference for persons connected with the East Indies, and which will save the necessity of applying to the Secretaries of the Company for information respecting individuals who are, or have been, in the Civil Service. One great advantage of the volume is that it distinguishes the dates at which each Officer received his appointment, from his entrance into the Service to the close of his career; it is executed with care and accuracy, and will supply a desideratum that has long been felt in this department.”—Atlas of June 29, 1839.
